

Edwin Farrow, Esq.

Born in Stamford, Ed moved with his parents to Bridgeport when he was 11. A graduate of Central High School, Ed earned a Bachelor of Arts Degree at Auburn University in Criminology where he graduated Cum Laude before joining LifeBridge to work with youth and juvenile justice management. A protégé of then CEO Brian Langdon, Ed was inspired to achieve greater goals. He went on to pursue a law degree at Quinnipiac University School of Law and today, he owns his own company, The Farrow Law Firm, which specializes in real estate transactions and is owner of ASF Consulting & Networking Services which provides research, legal writing, and business development consulting for small businesses.

Deeply rooted in the community, Ed has served as Bridgeport Police Commissioner and was the founding Board member of the Great Oaks Charter School, a middle and high school serving over 500 students in grades 6-12. Among the many other roles he has filled as a community activist and leader, he has served on the Board of Managers of the Stratford YMCA and as a Board member at LifeBridge. He currently serves on the Board of Directors of the Bridgeport Neighborhood Trust and on the Board of Advisors for Merton House which provides permanent supportive housing for homeless women with children. The two building, 22-unit complex is owned by Connecticut Housing Partners with case management services provided by Catholic Charities of Bridgeport.

Ed is an exemplary role model for our Scholars who only need the encouragement to dream big to see where life takes them.
